NOTE: The literature in this schedule was difficult for me to divide up by chapter. Instead I recommend dividing it up by pages. Since some of us will be using home printed books and others will be using yard sale or thrift store editions, it's impossible for me to divide the pages up for you. All of the literature books are on a 4-week schedule. To figure out how many pages to read per week, look at the total number of pages in each book. Divide this by 4 and you will know how many pages to assign per week. For instance if your book contains 200 pages, then $200 \div 4 = 50$. Your child should read 50 pages a week. Figure the number of pages per week well in advance and mark them on this schedule so you and your child will both know what's expected. This will also need to be done for the biographies which are on an 8-week schedule and Pilgrims Progress which is on a 40 week schedule.
