NOTE: The literature in this schedule was difficult for me to divide up by chapter. Instead I recommend dividing it up by pages. Since some of us will be using home printed books and others will be using yard sale or thrift store editions, it's impossible for me to divide the pages up for you. Two of the books are read on a 5-week schedule: The Prince and the Pauper & A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court. When you have your books, look at how many pages they have. Divide this by 5 and you will know how many pages to assign per week. For instance if your book contains 200 pages, then $200 \div 5 = 40$. Your child should read 40 pages a week. The remaining books: Ivanhoe, Hunchback of Notre Dame & The Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc are each on a 10-week schedule. If your book contains 500 pages then $500 \div 10 = 50$. Your child should read 50 pages per week. Figure the number of pages per week well in advance and mark them on this schedule so you and your child will both know what's expected. This will also need to be done for most of the biographies which are on a 5-week schedule.
